

The Sunday Times (London)

by Dilys Powell

"... A bold, violent film which with its fragmented picture of three young men and a beautiful girl in search of a just society expresses the young director's angry regret that revolution so far, while changing the face of power, has failed to change the nature of men..."